Charlie likes to shop online because he can often find pretty good deals. One day, he came across a brand-new phone for about half the price that other dealers were selling it for. Charlie immediately entered his credit card details on the website.

A few days later, Charlie received the package containing the phone he ordered. He eagerly ripped it open, but his joy turned instantly into disappointment when looking inside the box. There were several scratches on the screen of the smartphone, and the volume buttons didn't work. Charlie phoned the number on the website in anger, but there was no answer. After that, Charlie decided to be more careful before making a purchase.
