The Turkish president has introduced a new bill to manage stray dogs in the country. This bill has caused a lot of debate. Animal rights activists worry about the dogs, but some people want to 11 dogs to make the streets safer. The bill says that stray dogs will be taken to shelters, neutered, and spayed. Aggressive dogs or those at risk of 12 will be put to sleep. There are about four million stray dogs in Turkey. The government is acting after a child was hurt by stray dogs in Ankara.

The first version of the bill said dogs 13 in 30 days would be put to sleep, causing public anger. The new version asks cities to improve shelters and 14 people to adopt the dogs. There are already laws to neuter and spay stray dogs, 15 these are not well enforced. Animal rights groups believe better enforcement is enough. Travelers to Turkey are advised to be careful around stray dogs.

For over 30 years, Taiwan has relied on many migrant workers to support its labor force. Despite their important roles, most Taiwanese people know little about these workers. To address this, Chien Yung-ta, a former reporter, wrote a book called "Underground Lives – Stories Untold for Migrant Workers in Taiwan." 46 Chien spent time in First Square, a place in Taichung where many migrant workers gather, and saw their energetic community with shops, bars, and restaurants created by the workers.

Chien also highlights the difficult conditions that migrant workers face. 47 Taiwan's strict regulations make it tough for these workers to improve their lives. Chien argues that migrant workers need better protection and more rights. 48

Despite these challenges, migrant workers find ways to improve their situations. 49 Chien admires their courage, comparing them to the early settlers who came to Taiwan seeking a better life. Chien hopes that his book will encourage more discussions in Taiwan about how to support and integrate migrant workers into society.

50 In Germany, Turkish workers eventually became an important part of society after starting as guest workers. Japan and South Korea are now making their laws better to offer permanent residency to foreign workers. Chien hopes that learning from these international experiences will help Taiwan better support its migrant workers and prepare for the future.

- (A) They form friendships, start businesses, and support each other.
- (B) They are more likely to suffer from workplace injuries compared to local workers, and getting proper help is often challenging.
- (C) Chien suggests that Taiwan's policies toward migrant workers should change, looking at examples from other countries.
- (D) This book reveals the hidden lives of migrant workers and their significance in Taiwanese society.
- (E) He believes that Taiwan's policies should be updated to meet the needs of this important labor force.

Mosquitoes seem to like some people more than others. Scientists from the Virginia Tech university in the USA believe the smell of our body could attract mosquitoes. This includes our natural body odor and smells from soaps and perfumes. Some of these smells could also help to reduce the number of bites we get in the summer. The researchers said mosquitoes seemed to prefer soap with a flowery smell. The lead researcher said over 60 percent of our body smell comes from soap rather than natural body odors. He said that changing the soap we use could change how attractive we are to mosquitoes. Soap with a neutral or no smell could make us less tasty to the creatures.

The researchers tested the effects on mosquitoes of four popular brands of soap. They analyzed the smell of different people after they used each soap, and when they did not wash themselves. The researchers recreated the soapy and unwashed smells and put them in two different cups in a cage full of mosquitoes. The insects seemed to prefer the flowery smells from the soapy cups. Mosquitoes may act like humans because they are attracted by floral and fruity smells. One researcher gave some advice. He said: "I would choose a coconut-scented soap if I wanted to reduce mosquito attraction." Mosquitoes are the world's deadliest creatures. The diseases they carry kill about 725,000 people a year.

51. According to the research, what are the factors that could attract mosquitoes to some individuals more than others?
- (A) Natural body odor and weather conditions.
(B) Coconut-scented soap and lotion.
(C) Body odor and soap scents.
(D) Clothing and soap colors.
52. What type of soap scent did the researchers find mosquitoes to prefer the most in their experiments?
- (A) Stinky.                      (B) Flowery.                      (C) Neutral.                      (D) Herbal.
53. How did the researchers conduct their experiment to test the effects of soap scents on mosquitoes?
- (A) They exposed mosquitoes to various natural body odors.
(B) They sprayed different perfumes on mosquitoes and observed their behavior.
(C) They placed two cups with recreated soapy and unwashed smells in a cage with mosquitoes.
(D) They observed the mosquitoes' responses to different weather conditions.

How do top stars avoid feeling anxious about making mistakes during their performances? For Beyoncé and Adele, the key was adopting an alternate persona.

Beyoncé's alter ego was 'Sasha Fierce.' By imagining herself as Sasha, Beyoncé could perform with greater confidence and sensuality. "Usually when I hear the chords, when I put on my stilettos, like the moment right before when you're nervous... then Sasha Fierce appears, and my posture and the way I speak and everything is different," she told Oprah Winfrey in 2008. Beyoncé used this method until 2010 when she felt she no longer needed the psychological crutch. (1)

Similarly, Adele was inspired by Beyoncé and thus created 'Sasha Carter,' combining Beyoncé's Sasha Fierce and the real country star June Carter. This strategy helped Adele perform confidently during her breakout year. These cases show that creating a separate identity can offer psychological benefits.

(2) Through the strategy, we can step back from our immediate feelings, which allows us to view a situation more dispassionately and rationally. It helps us to reduce undesirable feelings like anxiety and increase our self-control and perseverance in challenging tasks. (3)

To try self-distancing, researchers recommend choosing different personas for different goals. For example, imagine yourself as a smart family member for personal issues or a work mentor for job challenges. Whatever persona you pick, the practice should create some psychological space away from potential distraction, while also reminding you of the behaviors you want to imitate. (4)

54. If the following sentence was to be included in the passage, which place should it go to?

Whether you're placing yourselves in the shoes of a great figure or Beyoncé herself, a little imagination might help you approach the ideal person you wish to become.

- (A) 1.                      (B) 2.                      (C) 3.                      (D) 4.

Dopamine dressing is the idea of dressing to enhance one's mood and is a new term that came into existence during the COVID-19 pandemic. This concept became particularly popular after the pandemic as a way to cope with stress and negative emotions such as anxiety and boredom. Instead of simply following current fashion trends, dopamine dressing is about finding joy in expressing yourself with what you wear.

The term dopamine dressing initially came about when it was coined by fashion psychologist Dawnn Karen in 2020. Dopamine is a neurotransmitter related to feelings of reward and pleasure in the brain. When you do something pleasurable, dopamine is released in the brain and causes the feeling of joy, which causes habit-forming behavior. Dopamine also partially explains why consuming junk food can be addictive. Therefore, Karen coined the term "dopamine dressing" to reflect that what we wear can enhance joy.

The notion of dopamine dressing suggests that you choose what to wear without regard for how others might judge you, allowing you to express yourself and enhance joy. Different aspects of how one dresses, such as color, image, style, shape, and beauty, can potentially affect one's mood or behaviors. Furthermore, dopamine dressing may involve addressing cultural norms and cultural sensitivities.

Dopamine dressing is about the expression of self through one's clothing to reflect how you feel or how you want to feel for the day. When you dress while focusing on yourself instead of others, this can increase your dopamine levels and enhance your well-being.

58. Which of the following is NOT discussed in the passage?
- (A) The definition and concept of dopamine dressing.
 (B) The reason behind the popularity of dopamine dressing.
 (C) The connection between dopamine dressing and the neurotransmitter dopamine.
 (D) The particular color choices for dopamine dressing that improve feelings of pleasure.
59. According to the passage, what is the main function of dopamine?
- (A) Protecting the brain and maintaining balanced brain chemicals.
 (B) Creating emotional responses linked to stress and tension.
 (C) Boosting feelings of happiness, satisfaction, and motivation.
 (D) Moderating and reducing addictive behaviors.
60. Which of the following people most likely embraces the concept of dopamine dressing?

(A)	 I usually wear a black suit to ensure a professional appearance for my clients.	(B)	 Recently, I've chosen to wear the color blue to stay updated with fashion trends.
(C)	 To convey my quiet personality and make myself feel comfortable, I prefer to wear white and gray colors.	(D)	 My parents believe I look great in bright-colored clothing, so I adjust my dressing habits to make them happy.
